Focus on: Canadian Business & Current Affairs Complete (CBCA)

Imagine that you are catching up on your professional reading and you find a reference to a great article... but that issue isn't available in the stores anymore. It's 10pm and the library is closed – or is it? Get it online from Proquest's CBCA Complete, available online through Essex County Library at <http://www.essexcountylibrary.ca>, and all you need to get started is a FREE library card and PIN!

CBCA Complete provides the broadest, deepest, and richest collection of Canadian materials covering current events, business, science, the arts, reference, and education information. Full text access to over 540 periodicals and daily news sources is provided, of which more than 89% are Canadian. Article indexing is available for an additional 1,100 titles, of which more than 95% are Canadian. Additional content from outside Canada is also available.

Think you might like to get updates on your specialty on a regular basis? CBCA can do that too! Take advantage of the Alerts service – fill in your email address, and it will send you emails as frequently as you like, for as long as you want! Does it get any better than this?

Full text content is available from 1985-present, citations are available from 1971-present, and all are fully searchable. If you only want to see results that include full text, you're in luck! You easily limit your search to only those results that have the full text of the article, so that you can get it right now!

An example:

If you search for the 100 mile diet, you get 35 results. If you limit that to include ONLY full text, then you get 22 results that have the full text of the article available RIGHT NOW with the click of a mouse button. You can click on the full text link on the article "Local produce key to new Loblaw push" which was written by Hollie Shaw and published by CanWest News on Aug 21, 2008 and read the full article – and even print it or email it to yourself for future reference.

Anytime, day or night, ECL is making your life easier, one answer at a time.
